Use of cookies

Definition and use of cookies

A cookie is a file downloaded to your your computer, tablet, phone or other terminal (hereinafter called device) when accessing our website. Cookies allow us to store and retrieve information about your browsing habits from your device and, depending on the information they contain, to recognize you as a user or client if you have signed up previously.

The information obtained is related, amongst other things, to the number of pages visited, as well as to the language, the location, the number of new users, the frequency of the visits, returning users, the duration of your visit, and the browser or device used for the visit. In order to improve your navigation experience and to customize our services, PINTÓ RUIZ & DEL VALLE uses cookies specifically for the following purposes:

- Analysing the navigation behaviour (visited sections, where you clicked, etc.)
- Preventing fraudulent activities
- Maximizing the safety of our website

Types of cookies

There are two types of cookies depending on who is the entity managing the domain where the cookies are sent from and handling the data obtained: own and third-party cookies. The main difference is whether they belong to the owner of the website (PINTÓ RUIZ & DEL VALLE, S. L. P.) or to a third party.

Another possible categorization is based on the period of time that they remain stored on the client's browser: session cookies or persistent cookies. The first ones expires after closing the browser, while the second ones remain stored in the device.

Finally, there is another categorization with five types of cookies based on the purposes of the data obtained: technical, customisation, analytic, advertising and behavioural advertising cookies.

Technical cookies enable the user to navigate through a website, platform or app as well as to use different options or services available, such as controlling the traffic and transmission of data, identifying the user session, accessing restricted areas, remembering the items of an order, purchasing an order, processing a registration or an event request, using safety elements during the navigation, storing contents for video or sound broadcasting or sharing content in your social media.

Customisation cookies enable the user to access the service with some predefined general features based on a number of criteria from the device of the user, such as language, type of browser, regional settings, etc.

Analytic cookies enable tracking and analysis of the behaviour of the users of the websites to which they are linked. This is how navigation profiles are created for the users of such websites, apps and platforms with the aim of introducing improvements based on the analysis of the usage data provided by the users of the service.

Advertising cookies enable an efficient management of the advertising spaces included by the editor on the website, app or platform where the services are available. Management is based on criteria like the edited content or the frequency in which ads are shown.

Finally, behavioural advertising cookies enable an efficient management of the advertising spaces included by the editor on the website, app or platform where the services are available. These cookies store information about the behaviour of the users obtained from continuous observation of their navigation habits, which helps develop specific profiling to show relevant ads.

One cookie may be included in several categories. For further information on this please check the Guide on the use of cookies by the AEPD \(Spanish Data Protection Agency\).
